3. You are a struggling screenwriter sitting alone in a room, surrounded by food wrappers and empty coffee cups, staring at a blank page. Suddenly you have an idea for a new, thirty-minute series, for all the family, based around a school. Summarise the plot, and describe the main characters and their relationships.

4. People often do strange things to attract attention to their situation, or to something they feel strongly about. Write a newspaper account of a successful attempt to gain publicity.

5. Can you remember, or imagine, someone who is really funny? Describe a situation she or he was involved in, and explain its appeal to you.

6. Conflict between religious groups causes great pain and suffering. Describe a conflict you know about, and propose a solution both sides can accept.
